Accession Number: unknown

Creator: Navajo County Superior Court

Administrative History: Navajo County was established March 21, 1895, as Arizona's twelfth county. It was formed out of the western portion of Apache County and the county seat is located in Holbrook.

Up to 1955, petitioners wanting to be naturalized had to file a Declaration of Intention after living in the United States for at least three years and then had to file a Petition for Naturalization at least two years after filing their Declaration of Intention. After 1955, petitioners no longer had to file a Declaration of Intention. Up to 1922, married women and minors received derivative naturalization through their spouse or parent. After 1922, women had to petition for naturalization separately from their husbands. Minor children still received derivative naturalization. Single women over the age of 21 always had to petition separately. From 1907 to 1922, any American born woman that married a foreigner lost her citizenship and assumed the citizenship of her husband. After a divorce or the husband's death, the woman could petition to have her citizenship reinstated.

Scope and Content: This collection contains volumes of Declarations of Intentions, Petitions for Naturalization, and one volume of petition recommendations. Six of the seven volumes were put into one box for preservation purposes. Declarations of Intentions typically include name, birthplace, age, nation of allegiance, country of migration, and place of intended settlement. Early Petitions for Naturalization do not include much more than the petitioner's name. Later naturalization records contain more information, including information on spouse and children.

Access Restrictions:

All photocopies of original materials are made by staff. We reserve the right to refuse copy services based on physical condition and possible damage to the materials.

For preservation purposes, if microfilm copies are available, patrons will use the microfilm first. Under A.R.S. 39-121, public records used for commercial purposes have additional requirements. Please contact the Arizona State Archives for further information.

It is the researcher's responsibility to determine the copyright status of materials he or she uses. The Arizona State Library, Archives and Public Records is not legally or financially responsible for any copyright infringement by researchers.

Many documents held by the Arizona State Archives come under the Public Record law (ARS 41-1350). Documents created by the government are not copyrighted. The United States of America
